1. Agency Regulation [ ] provides that military personnel serving with the Agency are entitled only to the pay, allowances and other monetary benefits to which they would be entitled were they serving their parent service at the same post of assignment. The pay, allowances and monetary benefits of civilian personnel are those provided in Agency Regulations.

2. The fact that the provisions of Joint Travel Regulations and Standardized Government Travel Regulations differ as to the authorization of mileage allowance for civilians and military personnel, does not change the allowance payable to either in case they travel together by private car. Each is entitled to mileage according to the regulations governing civilians and military personnel respectively.

3. Therefore, your questions are answered as follows:

(a) When a military person rides as a passenger in a personal car of a civilian employee, being used for official travel of both individuals, the civilian employee is entitled to the mileage allowance authorized by Standardized Government Travel Regulations (i.e., ten cents per mile) and the military person is entitled to the allowance provided in Joint Travel Regulations for military personnel who ride as passengers (i.e., five cents per mile).

(b) When a civilian rides as a passenger in a personal car of a military person, being used for official travel of both individuals, the military person is entitled to the mileage allowance provided in Joint Travel Regulations
